LYON'S MAGNETIC POWDER,

Will destroy Garden Insects, Cockroaches, Bed Bugs, Fleas, Ants, Moths, and all pests of the vermin kind.

The importance of a reliable article of this kind is inestimable. In warm weather all nature teems with these annoying foes. This powder is the only article ever discovered which will exterminate them. A company of botanists, from the Horticultural Society of Paris, while amidst the ferns of Asia, observed that all insects lighting upon a certain kind of plant very soon dropped dead. This fact was made use of to guard their night camps from these intruders. Quantities of the plant were brought home by Mr. E. Lyon, and found a positive insect destroyer in every experiment. It is simply a powdered leaf, chemically prepared to resist the effect of age and climate. Medals and Letters Patent have been obtained from the Governments of England, France, Germany, and Russia, from the World's Fair, and numerous medals and horticultural colleges and societies.

Letter from the President of the U. States.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, 31st Jan., 1858.

"MR. EMANUEL LYON.—Dear Sir:—I have the pleasure to inform you that the Royal Commission of the World's Fair, at London, have awarded you a Medal and Certificate for the great value of your Magnetic Powder, for exterminating insects, &c."

MILLARD FILLMORE, Chairman.

The above was accompanied by a certificate of Prince Albert.

IT IS FREE FROM POISON.

New York, October 1st, 1858.

Mr. E. Lyon.—Dear Sir: We have analyzed and tested your Magnetic Powder and find them perfectly harmless to mankind and domestic animals, but certain death when inhaled by bugs, ants, insects.

JAS. R. CHILTON, M. D., Chemist.

LAURENCE REID, Prof. Chem.

New York Hospital.

Mr. John L. Rome, Superintendent of the New York Hospital, says, "he has expelled all the bugs, ants, roaches, moths, &c., with Lyons' Powder, and made it of immense value."

Every gardener must have a direct interest in an article of this kind. Reference can be made to the Astor, St. Nicholas, and Metropolitan Hotels; to Judge Meigs, President of the American Institute; James Gordon Bennett, Gen. Winfield Scott, Cyrus W. Field, M. D. Pease, of the Five Points Mission, etc., etc. Judge Meigs says, "This discovery of Prof. Lyon is of national importance. The Farmers' Club have tested it thoroughly. It will destroy locusts, grasshoppers, ants, moths, bugs, and all vermin. Garden plants can be preserved, and houses made pure."

Arrangements are now made through Messrs. BARNES & PARK, of New York, to have it sold throughout the world. Many worthless imitations are advertised. Be cautious!

New York, November 8th, 1858.

"In retiring from business, I have sold all my Insect Powders and Pills, Letters Patent, and the secrets pertaining thereto, to Messrs. BARNES & PARK. This Powder is a discovery made by myself, and brought from the interior of Asia, and is unknown to any other persons. The genuine and effective article is put up in tin canisters, and will continue to bear my name. E. LYON."

Rats and mice cannot be reached by a powder and are killed by a Magnetic Pill. Order them through any merchant.

"The Lyons' Powder kills insects in a trice. But Lyons' Pills are mixed for rats and mice. Sample boxes, 25 cents; regular size, 50 cents and $1 00. Follow directions. Use freely and thoroughly."

NEW LIQUOR STORE.

H. FELSENHOLD,
VICKSBURG, MISS.

IMPORTER of and dealer in Foreign and Domestic Brandy, Whiskies, Wines and Cigars.

Washington Street, (next door to a Guellet's Variety Store), respectfully informs the citizens of Vicksburg and the surrounding country, that he has this day opened the best, largest and most complete stock in the above line, ever brought to this market, which he will sell at New Orleans importing prices.

Confining himself to the above articles alone, he flatters himself to rival competition.

Being connected with one of the largest houses in the United States, he will be constantly supplied with a full assortment at the lowest possible rates.

He solicits the custom of Vicksburg, and all those visiting the city, to give him a call and judge for themselves.

All goods warranted—if not as represented, may be returned at the seller's expense.

Poetry.

THE SPRING.

BY GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

The Spring! The Spring! She comes again! In the sunny world once more!
The children sweet they meet and greet and pull her to the door!

Like a maiden, darning home her song; O echoes and depart!
Her smile's the key in every door of the prison of the heart!

All things remember, seeing her—her traveling choir the birds!
What singing in the sunshine, and what lowing of the herds!

The lambs, that only Winter knew, have like a garland bound her—
As if they knew her long ago, all gladdening dance around her!

The trees she only looks upon—green leaves begin to grow:
The orchard blushes! Is it snow?—but oh! how fragrant snow!

All things are in the sunny air, white'er can learn to fly:
The very worm has brightest wings, in its heaven—the butterfly!

The Spring! The Spring! She is here again—her train the brightest hours!
And the last of the snow, she is smiling so, forgets it was not—flowers!

A QUIET LOVER'S QUESTION.

Quiet skies in quiet lakes,
No wind wakes,
All their beauty double;

But a single pebble breaks
Lake and sky to trouble;
Then dissolves the foam it makes

In a bubble.
With the bubble in my hand,
Here upon the brink I stand;
Meanwhile, standing on the brink,
Let me think!

Not for her sake, but for mine,
Let those eyes unquestioned shine,
Half divine:

Let no hand disturb the rare
Smoothness of that lustrous hair
Anywhere:

Let that white breast never break
Its calm motion—sleep or wake—
For my sake.

Not for her sake, but for mine,
All I might have I resign.

Should I glow
To the hue—the fragrance fine—
The mere first sight of the wine,
If I drained the goblet low!

Who can know!
With her beauty like the snow,
Let her go! Shall I repine
That no idle breath of mine
Melts it? No! 'Tis better so.

All the same, as she came,
With her beauty like the snow,
Cold, unspotted, let her go!

LITTLE LOVE WORDS.

"Darling, there is no light in the house when you are ill!" and the aching head of the young wife was drawn tenderly to her husband's bosom, while with the gentle touch of love's true magnetism he smoothed back from her throbbing temples the disheveled waves of soft brown hair.

She raised her head for a moment, pressed a grateful kiss upon the broad white brow, which to her, was always so beautiful, and nestled down beneath a loving arm, blest and peaceful as the dove in her downy nest, the bright head drooped a little, the rounded limbs relaxed, and she sank away into a sweet and balmy slumber.

These little love words! how they fell like drops of honied nectar on her aching senses; and though they were the moan of a heart whose best light was the glance of her blue eyes, yet they swept over her heart strings, thrilling every chord to sweetest music. Already had they stilled one-half her suffering, and though the quick pain-throb still beat in her blue veins, it had no power to drown the sweet strong voice of her soul, which went singing through the beautiful gate of dreams—"fond, faithful and true!"

Does the worldling say, with his well bred sneer—"an episode of the honey-moon?" Not so. Years, "many-braided years" had rolled away since they stood before God's holy altar and pledged their solemn vows. When love came to their lives, it was like young spring verdure bursting brightly through dark brown buds, yet was it not a passion flower springing into gorgeous beauty and fading away with the summer—but like the hardy and vigorous oak it struck its roots deeper and deeper into the rich soil, and threw forth its strong out-spreading branches, alike to sunshine, and to storm. It is not to be supposed that either was perfect, or even that either deemed the other so, perhaps—yet they knew that they had loved worthily, and together they felt their souls rich to enjoy life's blessings, and strong to take up its burdens. If there was one of the "commandments" which they sought earnestly to obey, it was that "new commandment" of the Savior, "Love one another." No discord mingled in their soft home music, no aching brow was ever denied the caress of cool and pleasant fingers, no disappointed spirit ever passed unsmoothed by the harmonies of happiness, no grieved heart ever craved in vain the holy ministrations of love.

Oh! ye whom "God has joined together," ye who "love one another," ye who tread life's journey together, be not chary of the little love words! Bask in their gentle lady, of the noblest heart that loves thee, and that for thy sake wages war with the world, in its ever weary with the strife? Does it ever droop beneath the long day's toil? Thine is the heart which best should know. Ask and see if it be so. Then love him and cheer him with that love. Assure him in everything he does your heart is with him, and believe me, he will not often do wrong. Let the little love words flock out like bees, honey-laden, but stingless, and go searching, deep in his heart's garden for blossoms—he sure that they will find some, even though they may be but few. You may think him cold, and say that he does not need such ministrations—not so—we all need them. To the world—to you even, if yours is not a sympathetic nature, he may wear the outward semblance of sternness, but approach, look nearer, look deeper into those impassive eyes, and you will see the beggared and desolate expression—the great hunger of a famishing soul—which your love alone can satisfy. Do not deny it, but give it freely, joyfully, and bless God for the power of conferring so great a happiness. Tell your husband that you love him. Do not send him out to stare life in the face, to meet its mockery and endure its frown, without these sweet whispers from your heart, which shall ever rise like the harping of angels, over the din of the world, singing ever in his ear the chorus, "Fond, faithful and true!"

And you, proud man, think not that love and the expression of it is less your duty. The gentle heart which you have won, and which you have sworn "to love, to cherish until death do us part," will always need your kindly care. Do not allow her to take your affection as a matter of course. This cannot satisfy a loving woman's heart. Praise her, encourage her, confide in her, tell her again and again that is dear to you, the very "light" of your heart and house. All life has its sorrow and suffering, but she will gather from a few low, honied words of yours, nectar sufficient to sweeten many a bitter cup, and so drink the wormwood unmurmuring. You have lived her "companion" for years, and yet never discovered the full riches of her heart. "I love you" is the open sesame to its treasure. Seek to understand her. Strive to look into the depths of her nature. Listen if the glad tones of her voice are lowered and broken since she became your wife; watch if the blush-rose is paler on her cheek than before she was a bride. If so, all is not well. She may seem to you cheerful and unrepining, while her soul wears the sackcloth of desolation, and her weary spirit faints under the "heat and burden of the day." The sweet, uncomplaining lips may greet you with a smile, but light in her eye is only a tear, which she turns aside to dash away—alone they rain over the white and suffering face, in your presence they are with a martyr-like effort forced back upon her heart. Oh! then be so sparing of the little love words! When you leave her, let it be with a whole summer's sunshine garlanded in your smile, and when you come again bring not in your cold indifferent eyes, that dreariness of desolation which stares out from the leaden sky of winter upon the destitute, the homeless. When she flees to you like the weary bird, which folds its wings in some stately palm, and dips its bosom, covered with the dust of the desert, in the cool refreshing fountain—oh! let her slumber there awhile in the spice winds from the foliage, and your heart's fountain sings cheerily its happy song—"Fond, faithful and true!"
